

Workshop on the History & Development of Psychoanalytic Theory & Technique

Connexion Psychological Practice

This is the first in a series of one-day workshops tracing the development of psychoanalytic theory from the foundations laid by Sigmund Freud up to the present day. Developments in Ego Psychology, the British School of Object Relations Theory, Self Psychology and Interpersonal Psychoanalysis will all be covered over the course of 3 (three) workshops; in addition, there will be presentations on the important contributions of Melanie Klein, Eric Erikson, Jacques Lacan and the Modern Freudians. Students completing the course of workshops will have been exposed to a comprehensive overview of the psychoanalytic field as it exists today.

Participants in this first workshop will learn about the Freudian origins of psychoanalytic theory and technique and its subsequent development by the Freudian Ego Psychologists. The Freudian & Ego Psychological perspectives will then be contrasted with the viewpoints of Harry Stack Sullivan and Contemporary Interpersonal Psychoanalysis.

Morning Session:

The Development of Psychoanalytic Theory & Technique Lecture I – Classical Freudian Psychoanalysis and Ego Psychology

Afternoon Session:

The Development of Psychoanalytic Theory and Technique Lecture II – From Harry Stack Sullivan to Contemporary Interpersonal Psychoanalysis
