Day I (March 18, 2013) - History & Development of Psychoanalytic Theory and Technique (lectures 3 & 4 of a six lecture series)

Morning Session: Fairbairn, Winnicott and the British School of Object Relations Theory

Afternoon Session: Melanie Klein and the Modern Kleinians

Participants in this workshop will learn about major figures in the British School of Object Relations Theory and their theoretical and technical departures from classical Freudian theory and technique. The unique contributions of Melanie Klein will be considered independently, especially her attempts to apply fundamental Freudian concepts to the earliest years of infant development.

Day II (March 19, 2013) - Clinical Entities

The Psychopathology of Anxiety: Obsessive Compulsive Spectrum Disorders

Participants in this workshop will be introduced to a view of Obsessive Compulsive phenomena as points on a continuum of maladaptive interpersonal behaviour. This view will be contrasted with the psychiatric division of such phenomena into either biological or characterological disorders. Related clinical entities, such as phobias, will also be discussed. Clinical material will be included to illustrate the theoretical perspective presented.

Day III (March 20, 2013) - Technical Issues in Psychodynamic Psychotherapy

Symptoms and their Meaning: Interpersonal Psychoanalytic and Freudian Perspectives

Participants in this workshop will be invited to consider how a therapist's understanding of the meaning of a patient's symptoms affects his or her approach to the therapeutic process; Freud's medical model for understanding symptomatology will be contrasted with the Interpersonal Psychoanalytic view of symptoms as interactional phenomena with important transference-counter transference implications. Clinical material will illustrate the contrasting theoretical perspectives.
